It was Apple's new product release a few days ago, and I found the above picture online. This picture was retrieved from an article called: Visualizing Apple Product Release Patterns. Just like its topic, the picture shows the date of different apple releases from 2007 to 2022. The reason I like this visualization is because it converts days of a year into 365-366 squares and laid into big rectangles, then uses line charts to connect each release date and make it really easy to understand and know whether the release date was early or postponed each year.
